The Republican party was never in better mulition here than it is now, and the claim that the old soldiers and negroes of this place are go-ing over to the veto President, and to the party that for a century robbed the colored people of their labor and freedom, and now robs them of the elective franchise, is all in the imagination

Electric Storm in the East. NEW YORK, Aug. 4 .- Heavy rain and lightning prevailed in this city to-night. The light ing in the telegraph offices caused much alarm, while the rain came down in torrents. A boil of lightning ran from the electric lighting wires of the United States Illuminating Company to their building at the foot of East Twenty-ninth street, and set fire to the switch board, from which the flames rapidly spread to the roof. The firemen, assisted by the heavy rain, extinguished the flames and only $500 damage was done, but all the lights of that company on Broadway, between Fifty-second and Fourcenth streets, were put out, and two dynamos, valued at $85,000, were ruined. In the Western Union operating-room one operator was disabled by a severe shock that silenced many wires, burned out electric lamps and filled the place with a vivid flame and cut off connection temporarily. Why Mr. Lawler Declines to See Visitors in the Ladies' Reception Room.

Senator Palmer Decides that He Will Not Be a Candidate for Re-Election-Causes of the Popularity of the Michigan Man.

VIRTUOUS LAWLER.

His Reasons for Declining to See Visitors the Ladies' Reception-Room, Special to the Indianapolis Journas.

Washington, Aug. 4 .- Representative Frank Lawler, of Chicago, has become disgusted with what he terms "the harem," which is the ladies reception-room, immediately across the corridor and to the east of the Hall of Representatives. This reception-room is furnished like a large parlor in a private residence, and is the place where ladies go when they wish to see members of Congress, and from where they send their cards in to the legislators. The ladies' reception-room is one of the oldest institutions around the Capitol. It was established at the time the present Hall of the House of Representatives was constructed. Originally, there was seldom seen in this room an impure woman; but later it began to degenerate, and the weaker sex of questionable character began to habitate it. Two or three days ago a representative of the Woman's National League, of this city, called at the House to see Mr. Lawler, and from the reception-room she sent her card to the Chicago member. Mr. Lawler was told by the doorkeeper that a woman was in the reception-room, and he replied:

"That's all right; but I wont go out there, all

Three or four days afterward Mr. Lawler met the woman in the corridor of the Capitol and "I did not mean to treat you disrespectfully the other day, when you sent me your card, said he, "but I never meet a woman around the Capitol alone. I have also made it a rule to never go into that reception-room, which is nothing less than a harem. I do not mean to reflect upon the good women who go there; I only mean to say there are a great many bad ones who hang around that room, and I sometimes think that no self-respecting man would be found there."

see you then, Mr. Lawler?" "Call for me," replied the Chicago Congressman, "to come to some other door than the one leading to the harem; be sure to state on your card what business is desired of me. If you could hear the comments the members make on that reception-room, and the way they refer to it as 'the harem,' I don't believe you would ever go into it again."

"Who makes the ladies' waiting-room so dis respectfulf" inquired the woman. "The members, I suppose," replied Mr. Law-

Afterward this representative of the National Woman's League was discussing the attitude assumed by Mr. Lawler, and she took occasion to pay him some very excellent compliments, and to read a moral lecture, and in the course of her observations she said:

"I am very glad that there is one man in the House who has the moral stamina to stand up for what is right. There are comparatively few of them who will take the position he occupies. All this said, however, it is a burning shame that a place as public as the ladies' waitingroom to the House of Representatives, where the purest and best-known women of the country are obliged, at times, to go-where the wives and daughters, mothers and sisters of members, Senators, Cabinet officers and those from the great body of the people throughout the country -must sometimes congregate if they visit the Capitol to see their friends in the House, should become so debased. Of course, the great majority of women who are seen about this room are pure and good; but there are just a sufficient number of the disreputable to leaven the mass. Certainly, there would not be any of these depraved women around the Capitol if there was not a demand for them among members of the House. It is a reflection upon the good mothers throughout the country. Show me a vulgar, obscene man, and that man has had a coarse mother in nearly every instance. No matter what his station in life is, vulgarity, and obscenity, and moral depravity will cling to him as his natural boon and inheritance. I think the Woman's National League will take some kind of united action on this matter, and see if it is not possible to eradicate the evil influences that #### are polluting the national Capitol." SENATOR PALMER.

He Is Not a Candidate for Re-Election-The Causes of His Popularity.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—There is no more popular man in the Senate of the United States than Thomas W. Palmer, senior Senator from Michigan. Senator Palmer is a man upon whom fortune has smiled, and unlike the usual victims of that goddess's darts, Senator Palmer knows how to use his means in order that his fellowman may help him to enjoy it. The Senator has decided not to be a candidate for re-election to the Senate. This decision has caused real sorrow to his associates, as well as to the Republicans of his State congregated at Washington. There are men in the House who are auxious to shine in the Senate, but they see that Senator Palmer has made such a representative of the State of Michigan as will be difficult to emulate. He is without an enemy in the world, possibilities of the occasion, but his more emulate. He is without an enemy in the world, elaborate speech will be reserved till a later so far as known, although he is a of opinions and force; but he combines in himself all those pleasant indispensable attributes of a thoroughly good man which win popularity, and for this reason he can do more for his constituents than any new man who could possibly be sent here. The Senator, however has a following in Washington which will miss his presence more than any other class. This following is found among the poor people, who are dependent upon charity for their daily bread. Senator Palmer does not flaunt his deeds to the world. On the contrary, there is nothing about him to show that he has any extraordinary demands upon his purse. Yet I am told by a lady, who is prominent in many works of charity, that she never reports a case of real distress to the Senator which he does not investigate, and which he does not take immediata steps to relieve. Dozens of poor women, who have seen nothing but the darkest side of life until Senator Palmer appeared to them, owe to him the comparative presperity which they now enjoy. He has emissaries on the lookout for cases of distress constantly, and whenever he hears of a particularly trying case he sends an agent to investigate, with ample means to relieve immediate necessities and carte blanche to take such steps as may be necessary. Poor men with large families who have been thrown out of emplayment and to whom the present looks black and threatening, have been put upon their feet. and have found employment through the good offices of the senior Senator from Michigan. It is for this reason that the poorer population of Washington will regret has absence from the Senate more than that of any other one man, for while there are plenty of millionaires in the Senate and plenty of men who are willing to spend of their means to aid distress, there are few who have the tast to do it in that quiet, unostentations, yet telling manner, which has made Senator Palmer the friend of so many of the needy poor of the Nation's capital.

THEIR FIRST POCKET-KNIVES.

The Sentiment Attached to Them Passes a Bill Through the House.

Washington Special. A peculiar episode in the House to-day was the passage of the bill to pay E. P. Parker, of Memphis, a claim for $3,366. Parker and others were, years ago, bondsmen for Frank Parvis, collector of internal revenue for the Western district of Tennessee. Parvis defaulted for a considerable amount. Parker paid the above sum, his share of the loss, but the government failed to collect from the other bondsmen, and an act was subsequently passed relieving the ered only just that he should be reimbursed. When Enloe, of Tennessee, asked unanimous consent to call up the bill to-day. Hopkins, of Virginia, objected. Euloe pleaded for consent, and in the course of his brief remarks said that Parker gave him his first pocket-knife. This not only raised a laugh, but it touched the sentiment of every man in the House, each member of whom at once recalled tender memories of his first pocket-knife. "Withdraw!" "Withdraw," shouted a dozen members to Hop-kins, and "Let the bill pass!" shouted half a Chief-Justice Fuller Leases a $3,500-a-Year Mansion for Himself and Family.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 .- Chief-justice Fuller to-day effected a lease of the residence of A. L. Barber, the millionaire asphalt pavement contractor, at, it is said, a rental of $3,500 a year, one-third of his salary as a justice of the Supreme Bench. The mausion is of solid undressed stone, principally in the modern French style of architecture, and near to it is a solid stone stable, capable of holding fifteen or twenty horses. It is on the brow of Columbia Heights, on the corner of Fourteenth street and Clifton avenue, and overlooks the entire city and the Potomac, far down below Mt. Vernon. Within a stone's throw is the ancient mansion which General Logan bought just before his death, and in which he died. On Fourteenth street, a little fruther up the hill, is the fine new residence of Justice Harian, and close by it is the quaint half Swiss, half Queen Anne cot-tage of Mrs. Wood, widow of the late Justice Wood

The Barber mansion has about twenty rooms and three acres of ground, which will afford ample space for the new Chief-justice, his wife and his eight daughters. The mansion alone cost $120,000.

Defending the Pension Vetoes.

Washington Special. Chaplain McKinney's speech was written after consultation with Commissioner Black and President Cleveland, it is understood, and is interded to be the official reply of the President to criticisms made upon his vetoes of private pension bills. The most authentic and interesting portion of Mr. McKinney's speech was not delivered to-day, but he was granted leave to print certain statistics and other matter. These will be published in the shape of an appendix to his speech, and will consist of a revised official statement, giving the exact reasons for each of Mr. Cleveland's 197 vetoes of private pension bills. Each case will be given in full, with the history of it, taken from the Pension Office records. The President and his advisers, including General Black, the Commissioner of Pensions, are not only pleased with the veto messages, but proud of them, and the manuscript of the appendix to McKinney's speech has already been sent to New York, and is now being put in type, to become a part of the Democratic campaign text-book.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 4 .- At the close of the twelfth inning in to-day's Cincinnati-Cleveland game the score was a tie and both teams were anxious to continue play. Umpire McQuale, however, called the game on account of darkness. A remarkable running catch of Gilks and the catching of Snyder were the features. There was a heavy rain up to the very moment of calling the game, and this cut down the attendance to five hundred. Score:

ST. LOUIS, 4; BROOLYN, 4. NEW YORK, Aug. 4.-To-day's game between the Brooklyn and St. Louis teams at Washington Park, Brooklyn, ended in a draw at the end of eleven innings. Both teams were out for blood, and played desperately. Umpire Ferguson was yelled at by both sides and the spectators during the whole game. He lost his head in the ninth inning, and, putting on his coat and hat, tried to leave the grounds. This President Byrne prevented, and, after much coaxing. Ferguson returned and umpired two innings, finally calling the game when the men could have played for at least an hour longer.

St. Louis Special to Chicago Herald.

The action of Secretary Bayard in telegraphing Governor Morehouse that Minister West had asked a respite in the case of Hugh M. Brooks occasioned considerable interest here today. Mr. Fountleroy, one of Brooks's attorneys, is here. "That information is substantially correct," he stated, when questioned about the mat-"I have been expecting this for several days. The statement that the British minister acted on representations made to him by Mr. Fountleroy is erroneous. He acted under instructions from Lord Salisbury, the British Premier. The matter was brought about by influence on the other side. Minister West has no power to take such action on his own responsibility. He can only do so under instructions from the British government. The people in England induced Lord Salisbury to interfere. I presume members of Parliament and other other men who petitioned Governor Morehouse in Maxwell's behalf, assisted by Mr. Brooks, the prisoner's father, brought about this investigation. I sent over a lot of letters and documents in the case, and have done considerable correspondence by cable. Last Sunday I received a cablegram from Mr. Brooks informing me that the British minister had been ordered to interfere."

"Have you any new points to present to the Governor in behalf of your client in case the respite and hearing are granted?" "I have new points which have only come into my possession within the past few days. They are so strong that they will secure a commutation for Maxwell almost beyond peradventure of doubt. What they are I am not at liberty to state, but they are so strong that they would astound you if you were told them. They are

When the news reached here this morning that the British government had requested a further respite for Hugh M. Brooks, better known as Maxwell, on the ground that both the murderer and his victim were British subjects. it created no little surprise, though some new move has been looked for. Governor Morehouse has received merely a formal telegraphic notice that the papers have been forwarded by mail. Circuit Attorney Clover was not surprised, and thinks it probable a brief respite may be be granted. He is firmly convinced, however, that Maxwell must eventually hang. The friends of Maxwell from the British Ministry, while others assert that it is simply a petition forwarded through the usual diplomatic channels.

Among Irish Nationalists here the renewed efforts on behalf of Maxwell are causing much comment. It is recalled that when O'Donnell was under sentence of death during President Arthur's administration the United States government appealed to England on his behalf. Little notice beyond refusal was taken of the movement by the British authorities, and the local Nationalists contrast with some bitterness the circumstances attending the case of O'Donnell-at most a political crime-with the apparent willigeness manifested behalf of a man who committed one of the most cold-blooded murders in the annals of crime. The systematic brutality with which home-rulers are treated when under arrest in Ireland was also frequently referred to to-day, and many feeling references were made to the sad fate of Mandeville, killed by cruel treatment within the walls of Tullamore.

A BATTLE ROYAL.

The White House French Poodle Whips German Dachshund in Three Rounds. Washington Letter to Baltimore American. History has now to record a battle between the French and German on American soil. It took place at "Red Top," but the details were not given out to the public until all the particulars were learned. The fight took place on the 18th inst. at 3 P. M. The contestants were Mrs. Cleveland's French poodle, Hector, and Mrs. Folsom's imported German dachshund. The newcomer had just arrived, and being a stranger in a strange land, and having a voice that was equally strange to the surroundings, he consequently felt ill at ease. His ears were more accustomed to sounds less peculiar than those he heard. Like all visitors, he made it a point to investigate his new premises. The cat he looked upon with dread, and her flery "siss" kept him at a distance until more congenial times arrived. He roamed about the house a lord of all he surveyed. He next tried the lawn and there his fate was sealed. Hector lay under the shade of a maple asleep. The dream of long-ago days was upon him, and his imagination was reveling in the departed glories of the past. The sound of something aroused him, and from a corner of his eye he discovered the intruder. The enemy was larger than he, but the impulsive and courageous French spirit was aroused. The enemy stood still and Hector advanced. The battle began. The dogs walked around each other, They snarled and barked, and tired of this they joined battle.

Three rounds were fought and Hector came out victorious—the master of the situation. The German was worsted and sought consolation from the household. But poor Hector got it in the shape of a whipping. This he took with a sad heart. If "Jim, the Parrot," had been around, the German visitor would have been a dead dog. It was a big fight, and Hector's friends at the White House are rejoicing over his victory.

A pretty gown in white China silk was seen the other day with its drapperies caught in place wherever needed by bright little flags in enamel in lieu of ribbon bands. There was a flag pin on each shoulder, and another on the band of the sailor bat. Small flag buttons make decorative trimming for summer dresses, and narrow red, white and blue ribbons are tied about the throat or pinned upon the gown. The bandanna girl and the flag girl oppose each other at tennis, and in the "progress-ive" game when three or four courts are used the rivalry of the bright colors makes a picturesque afternoon scene.

Emperor William Will Visit London--His Proposed Interview With Humbert, [Coryright, 1888, by the New York Associated Press. ] Berlin, Aug. 4 .- Emperor William's monarchical itinerary since his interview with Prince Bismarck at Friederichsruhe, has been modified in most important directions. It was supposed that the Emperor, in accordance with a family arrangement, would pay his respects to the Queen of England during her projected through the German embassy at London, that she did not intend to go either to Baden or to any other place on the continent. Yesterday a formal note was sent by Prince Bismarck. through the English embassy, asking that the Queen receive Emperor William, who, the note stated, intended to visit England. Foreign office officials believe that Prince Bismarck intends to accompany Emperor William to England for the purpose of conferring with the Queen on affairs relating to the late Emperor Frederick.

Nothing is settled regarding the Emperor's roposed interview with King Humbert, Dr. Von Schloezer, the Prussian envoy to the Vatican, has had daily interviews with Mgr. Galimberti, the papal puncio at Vienna, his efforts being directed toward reconciling the Pope's protest against the reception of the Emperor at Rome with the Vatican's claims. Dr. Von Schloezer arrived at Friederichsrube to-day, bringing, it is surmised, the papal uitimatum. The Pope has been asked, if the Emperor goes to the Vancan and remains as the guest of the Pope for a day prior to his reception at the Quirinal, whether he will withdraw his objections. Mgr. Galimberti is understood to have replied that the Pope must maintain his temporal rights. The nuncio continues to urge the Emperor to forego his visit to King Humbert unless the meeting take place at Milan or Turin.

AT SHAKSPEARE'S HOME. claim that the request for a respite comes direct Augustin Daly's American Company Plays at Stratford-on-Avon. Stratfordoon-Avon Cable to New York World, Aug. 3. A host of Americans swarmed into this romantic town to-day and took the historic of Shakspeare's birth by storm. They were not tourists, with pockets full of money to buy old clocks and other revered relics and to frighten the peaceful people out of their homes, but a company of the best comedians America can produce. Daly's Theater Company was prepared to present the Shakspearean comedy, "The Taming of the Shrew," as it has never been produced in this place before. The rupopulation of Stratford saw to night "the Taming of the Shrew" in their handsome memorial theater with substantially the same actors and the same scenery as the New Yorkers saw it in Daly's own theater last winter. The house was packed with all the best people of Warwickshire, and the American actors received from them as hearty and cordial a greeting as they ever got in New York or London. Mr. Daly came here in a special train from London Thursday evening and bired the whole hotel to put his company and gueste in. This morning the American visitors roamed about to see the places filled with relics and reminiscences of Shakspeare, and in the afternoon participated in a garden party arranged in their honor at Avon Bank, the country residence of Charles Flower. All the society people in Stratford came out to meet them. Miss Rehan and all the ladies in the company were shown no end of attention. Four live lords were in the throng that perpetually hovered around their skirts. John Drew was made a present of a prize pug dog by Leith Thomas, the author, who is the wife of the schoolmaster of the same grammar school that Shakspeare learned his letters in. Mrs. John Gilbert went away loaded with the choicest flowers that grow on English soil. One young Squire wanted to give Phabe Russell a Shetland popy she admired, but she would not take it. James Lewis wanted a chair from the house Shakspeare was born in, but could not get it. There were a lunch and speeches at the garden party, and the Warwickshire 'squires brimmed over with bright and kind sayings about America, and American actors. They all professed a violent love for Mary Anderson, but thought they could find room in their hearts for Roban, too. The Mayor of Stratford, Sir Arthur Hodgson, spoke eloquently of what the American stage had for Shakspeare and the drama. done and Mr. Daly answered that his company would demonstrate before long that America was going to do better still. Lord Ronald Gower said that Stratford was always delighted to recieve Americans whether they were actors or not, for it had good reason to remember the generosity of some of its American visitors. The theater was not large enough to hold all the people who were anxious to get in to-night, and Mr. Daiy has the honor of raising a large sum of money towards the memorial fund. He gave the whole receipts to aid it, and they were so large that he will probably be made a member of the corporation. The cam-
